Animals On Campus: 2-Part Webinar Series

Once the live date has passed, these webinars will be available on demand.

Webinar 1: Animals On Campus: Developing Policies That Comply With Federal & State Laws Tuesday, November 27 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

The campus serves as a place of learning, a home, a workspace, and as a gathering place for members of its community. As more members of our campus communities look to bring animals with them into these various locations, universities are charged with developing welcoming and inclusive environments while maintaining a high level of service to the community as a whole. In order to fulfill that charge campuses must develop policies that comply with applicable federal and state laws, and establish expectations for any individuals interested in bringing an animal to campus.

During this webinar, you will learn about the various types of animals encountered on a college campus and the associated rights of those animal owners. Types of animals discussed include service animals, service animals in training, emotional support animals, therapy animals, and pets. The presenter will share personal experience leading the committee at Stetson University through the process of developing a campus-wide animal policy. The presenter will provide some resources to help with the development of a policy and subsequent education for university constituents.

Webinar 2: Animals On Campus 2.0: Creating Policies For Inclusion, Accountability & Safety Tuesday, December 4 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

The development of an animal policy is a collaborative effort bringing constituents from across the campus together to ensure compliance, support, and accountability for the entire community. The various perspectives brought to the table raise important questions and allow for multi-disciplinary problem solving. This ensures a comprehensive policy, as well as, complimentary procedures for the enforcement of the policy. During this webinar, we will briefly review the various laws and regulations to consider when developing the animal policy. We will then explore the various campus partners that can be helpful in bringing to the table during the development of an animal policy. Based on the presenter's experience chairing the animal policy committee, he will share some of the key contributions from the committee members and their role in the development and implementation of the final policy. The presenter will share how some of those contributions lead to the creation and/or refining of current campus procedures to ensure alignment with the policy. Finally, participants will have an opportunity to talk through some case studies to demonstrate how the animal policy and associated procedures would be used to support a healthy, safe, and welcoming campus culture.

Speaker(s)

Both webinars will be presented by:

Aaron Distler attended the University of Central Florida, a large public institution, where he earned his Bachelor's degree in Psychology with a minor in Sociology. Aaron continued his education at UCF obtaining his Master's degree in mental health counseling and a certificate in marriage and family therapy. Throughout Aaron's undergraduate and graduate careers, he gained a plethora of experiences within higher education including orientation, Greek life, student conduct, and housing and residence life. After graduation, Aaron received a job working at Stetson University, a small private liberal arts university, in DeLand, Florida, where Aaron oversaw the first-year residence halls. Aaron then transitioned into his current role at Stetson as the Associate Director of Academic Success and Accessibility. Aaron serves as the Section 504 coordinator for students establishing accommodations for students with disabilities. Aaron is also responsible for the success coaching program providing student support in the development of more global academic skills. Recently, Aaron chaired the university's animal policy committee comprised of various campus stakeholders. The animal policy was officially implemented during the 2016-17 academic year.
